Overview

What are the best Guadeloupe facts?

In this first part, it will be about the general best Guadeloupe facts: 1. Guadeloupe is very far from France, but it is still a French territory Guadeloupe is part of the Caribbean, an area reputed for being one of the most dreamy and paradisiac places in the whole world.

What is the climate like in Guadeloupe?

In Guadeloupe, the climate is tropical, hot and humid all year round, with a relatively cool and dry season from January to mid-April, called carême (Lent), and a hot, humid and rainy season from mid-June to mid-November, called hivernage (the root of the word reminds of the winter, although it is a hot season, and also quite sunny).

Why should you visit Guadeloupe?

Guadeloupe's blend of lush natural beauty and rich Creole and French culture make it a magical place to visit. The archipelago is an overseas region of France, and Guadeloupe's food, language, culture, attractions, and things to do reflect this strong tie.

When is the worst time to visit Guadeloupe?

The worst times are August through November during the rainy season. The French territory of Guadeloupe in the eastern Caribbean is in the Leeward Islands of the Lesser Antilles. It lies about midway between Antigua to the north and Dominica to the south. The island covers a land area of 1,628 square kilometers and has a population of 400,000.

What is not typical about Guadeloupe?

But what is not typical about Guadeloupe is the amount of heavy rain that falls on the island each year. The high rainfall is one reason why the island doesn't attract as many hotel and cruise visitors as other islands. But it does appeal to frequent Caribbean vacationers and ecotourists who want to visit somewhere new.

Does Guadeloupe have a dry season?

Like nearby Dominica, Guadeloupe is one of the wettest islands in the Caribbean. Its dry season is not nearly as dry or as long as most other islands in the region. The dry season runs from January to March when rainfall averages three inches a month.
