Hot water consumption is an important segment in the energy consumption in households in Serbia, where majority of households heat water with electric resistance storage water heaters. A more appropriate alternative is installation of solar water heating (SWH) systems in households.

In this case, a solar water heating system (SWHS) as an application of solar thermal technology provides some of the heat energy requirements for domestic hot water (DHW) and space.

Big solar thermal projects are the right solution for district heating decarbonization in Serbia because solar collectors on the ground are easy and inexpensive to install, but also because Serbia has high insolation per square meter, according to a panel on solar thermal as an element of sustainable urban energy systems in the process of the .

However, in the case where electricity is heavily subsidized by the government, the high upfront cost of SWH installation (starting at 450 €/m² for cheapest Solar Keymark systems in Serbia) and lack of public understanding of the benefits SWH systems offer, does not make them sufficiently attractive option for Serbian households. It is .
